PRESIDENT IMPROVING

The Danger From Two Sources Pronounced by the Physicians to be Practically Over.

THE WOUND NOW CONSIDERED HEALED

A Count of the Blood Showed That There is Not the Slightest Indication of Blood-Poisoning.

The Distinguished Patient Has Been Removed to Another Bed and His Allowance of Beef Tea Was Increased.

Milburn House, Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 10.—"God's contribution to the American people will be the sparing of the president's life." As the evening shadows were falling Monday night John G. Milburn, president of the Free Society, uttered these words as he stood before the house in which the nation's president was lying. The president's condition, as reported by the attending physicians, is such that the danger from two sources is pronounced to be practically over. The wound now considered healed. A count of the blood showed that there is not the slightest indication of blood-poisoning.

The president's strength or the straining of the wound. These slight movements from side to side are all that he has attempted thus far, and it is too early yet to think of his sitting up in bed or of any other marked use of his muscles. A most important development of the day was the private determination reached among those in charge of the case that food should be administered to the patient Wednesday by the mouth. Not since the shooting has a morsel of food been given to the president by natural means, but the drain on his system has been met by dissolved foods administered by injection. This has been a period of four days of fasting from ordinary means of nourishment, and Wednesday will be the fifth day. The importance of this feeding by the mouth is that it will restore the normal action of the stomach for the first time since that organ had both its walls pierced by a bullet. The doctors are satisfied that the time has come to renew these normal functions, and the four days which have elapsed since the wounds in the stomach were closed give every assurance that the sutures are sufficiently healed to allow nature to resume her sway.

Although the house was fairly embowered with flowers Tuesday sent as tokens of sympathy and gratitude, none of the sweet-scented blossoms was taken to the president's chamber. The most rigid system of simplicity prevails there, and sentiment is not allowed to qualify the stern requirements of the case. The only persons admitted to the sick room Tuesday other than the doctors and attendants were Mrs. McKinley and Secretary Cortelyou.

Although the president has been pronounced out of danger no member of the cabinet has yet been within the sick room nor has the vice president or those close to the confidence of the president, such as Senator Hanna and Judge Day, seen the president. But these restrictions established by the doctors are merely for the sake of encouraging every particle of energy in the patient, and relatives and friends alike accept the rigorous policy as decidedly for the best.

Milburn House, Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 11.—Late Tuesday night there was a slight scare at the Milburn residence caused by the protracted visit of the consulting physicians, who remained almost two hours and this was increased by the announcement in the official bulletin issued just before midnight that a slight irritation of the exterior wound, discovered on Tuesday night, had necessitated the opening of a few stitches of the wound.

As stated in the bulletin which all the doctors signed this irritation was attributed to the fact that a small fragment of one president's coat had been carried into the body by the bullet, and the name of Leon Czolgosz, the assassin of President McKinley, is best pronounced by recollecting how the Russian always introduces a "t" into the pronunciation of the name of czar. In the case of Czolgosz one should say "Tschal-gotch" with the "t" clearly sounded and the second "t" quite full. The average American, however, will get it as "Shawlgotch," and that is about as correct as he can make it. The assassin has lived in Detroit, other parts of Michigan, Cleveland and Cincinnati, and been in Chicago quite recently. He is without particular education, except in anarchistic doctrines. The picture given is one ordered taken by Chief of Police Bull, of Buffalo, and Secretary of War Root.

although this foreign substance was removed, a slight disturbance developed, which made necessary the opening of the wound. The doctors seek to allay apprehension by the positive statement that this incident can not give rise to any complications, and their frankness in giving the news to the public leaves no reason to question their entire good faith. The further fact communicated in the bulletin that the president is now well enough to begin taking nourishment in the mouth in the form of pure beef juice was of course gratifying, but the laymen the mere mention of a complication, however slight it might be, naturally created alarm.

But the most positive assurances were given that the only effect might be to delay slightly the healing of the wound. It was not in any way the result even of a suggestion of blood poisoning, the physicians declared, unless it was a matter of fact that it could not result in complications. The opening of the wound was in no sense an operation. Several of the stitches were simply taken out, and after a thorough antiseptic washing of the inflamed tissue, the wound was again sewed up. No anesthetic was necessary. Considerable delay was caused by the fact that the dressings desired by the surgeons were not in the house, and it was necessary to send into the city for it. The first time the messenger returned he did not have what was wanted, and he had to make another trip.

Dr. McBurney, who had intended to leave for Stockbridge, Ct., at 11:30, missed his train, and decided to remain over Wednesday night. But the doctor himself did all he could to dispel the idea that the change in his plans portended anything serious. In fact, he took occasion to announce as an additional evidence of the improvement of the president that it had been decided to begin to give the president nourishment through the mouth Tuesday night instead of waiting until Wednesday, as had been intended. Beef extract had been preferred, Dr. McBurney announced, and it was being administered as the physicians left. The other physicians who listened to Dr. McBurney's statement, as they then all entered an automobile and were whisked away.

Milburn House, Buffalo, Sept. 12.—At 11 a. m. Thursday morning everything was quiet at the Milburn house. All the lights are burning very low and no one is stirring about.

Buffalo, Sept. 12.—The condition of the president continued favorable throughout the day and nothing occurred to shake the faith of the attending surgeons and physicians have expressed that his location should prove troublesome later on, there will never be any necessity for removing it.

The attention of the physicians is now, therefore, mainly directed to the care and treatment of the wound caused by the incision made in the abdomen above the naval, where the operation was performed. This wound is progressing satisfactorily.

"Decided benefit followed the dressing of the wound Tuesday night" is the way the doctors put the matter. The slight scare which followed the announcement at midnight Tuesday night of the opening of the wound did not have a leg to stand on Wednesday when fuller details of its insignificant character and importance were obtained.

The president now breathes deeply and normally, and the addition of the respiration record to the bulletin was considered valuable. The president's pulse was slightly accelerated in the afternoon, but the change was not deemed material and the pulse remained practically stationary at 100.2 from daylight until dark. The evidences of improvement were the president's keen relish of the beef juice given him during the night and the increase in his allowance from one to two tins of the food, and also the fact that the wound is becoming "more healthy."

Dr. McBurney explained Wednesday afternoon that the slight irritation found still remaining should pass away within the next 24 hours. The president continues in excellent spirits, but confessed to one of the attendants Wednesday that he was getting lonesome. He requested that he be placed in another bed. A depression had formed in the mattress on which he has lain since he was taken to the Milburn house, and had caused him some discomfort. Another bed was provided, and Wednesday evening he was carefully moved from one to the other without difficulty.

Milburn House, Sept. 12.—At the conclusion of the night conference the doctors gave another extremely gratifying report of their patient's progress. The physicians did not begin to leave the Milburn residence until shortly before 11 o'clock. Two reports which they had to communicate could hardly have been more gratifying than they were. Dr. Wasdin and Dr. Mynter came out together. The latter was hemmed in on all sides by the eager newspaper men.

"Good news! Good news!" he cried; "nothing but good news. We have washed the wound, the president and moved him to another bed."

"Is he still improving?" "He is, and to prove it I desire to say that a count of his blood shows that it is in a normal condition, and we feel that we can announce definitely that there is not the least indication of blood poisoning."

He referred the reporters to Dr. Wasdin, of the marine hospital service, who was standing at his side, for a scientific interpretation. The latter explained that a count of the blood was a microscopic examination of the relative number of white and red corpuscles in the blood to determine whether inflammation of any sort existed. An increase of white corpuscles, relatively speaking, would show inflammation and deterioration of the blood that might indicate peritonitis.

He said that Wednesday morning a few drops of blood were taken from the lobe of the ear and microscopically counted under his direction. "We found," said he, "that the number of white corpuscles was just about normal, while the red cells were slightly below normal, due to insufficient nutrition since the operation."

"The point was not made," continued Dr. Wasdin, "to verify the fact that blood poisoning did not exist, of which I am sure, while the red cells were slightly below normal, due to insufficient nutrition since the operation."

"No, I would not say that; he is a very sick man, but his condition under the circumstances could not be better. That much I will say emphatically. It is now virtually decided that no attempt will be made to remove the president to Washington until he has completely recovered, and in a general way it can be said that there is no likelihood that this will be until October."

The physicians are all agreed that no attempt should be made to take the president to Washington while the probability of an oppressive hot spell in the capital city remains.

Mrs. McKinley still displays the same fortitude. She has not since the shooting occurred. She went out for a drive again Wednesday and appeared bright and cheerful. The five members of the cabinet who are here talked over pending public questions for over an hour Wednesday at the Milburn house, adjoining the Milburn residence, but it is understood that no action resulted. The South was an exchange of opinion regarding the legal phases of the case against the would-be assassin. It can be stated again that there is no conflict of authority between the state and federal authorities for the possession of the prisoner.

The members of the cabinet, Attorney General Knox and Secretary Gage, as well as those who are here, are unanimously of the opinion that Czolgosz's federal case should be tried in New York and Erie county, and that there is no federal statute to cover the case.

Gunboat Nashville at Sea. Suez, Sept. 11.—The United States gunboat Nashville arrived here Tuesday from Colombia and the Seychelle islands.

CHARGED WITH CONSPIRACY. Miss Emma Goldman, the High Priestess of Anarchy, Arrested in Chicago.

Chicago, Sept. 11.—Emma Goldman, the "anarchist queen," under whose banner Leon Czolgosz claims he stands, whose words he claims fired his heart and brain to attempt the assassination of the president, was arrested here shortly before noon Tuesday.

She disclaimed all but the slightest acquaintance with the president's assassin; she denied absolutely that she, or any anarchist she knew, was implicated in any plot to kill the president. She said she believed Czolgosz acted entirely on his own responsibility, and that he never claimed to have been inspired by her, as he is quoted as affirming.

The president, she averred, with a yawn, was an insignificant being to her—a mere human atom, whose life or death were matters of supreme indifference to her, or to any anarchist. Czolgosz's act was foolish, yet, she declared, it probably had its inspiration in the misery which the Pole had seen about him. Violence, she said, was not a tenet in the faith of the anarchist, and she had not advocated it in Cleveland, where Czolgosz has said he heard her, nor elsewhere.

Miss Goldman arrived here Sunday morning from St. Louis. Her immunity from arrest while in the Missouri metropolis and up to Tuesday in Chicago afforded her much amusement. She told, in sentence punctuated with laughter, of her capture Tuesday. In her conversation with reporters—and she talked with them at length twice during the day—the excitement she was laboring under was suppressed, and only once did she break down completely. That was when Capt. Schuetzler led her from the office of Chief of Police O'Neill to the cab which was waiting to convey her to the woman's annex of the Harrison street police station. For a moment she became a woman, pure and simple, and cried. In a moment, however, this exhibition of distress was over, and when she put her foot on the step to mount into the carriage she was again Emma Goldman, the "high priestess of anarchy," as she has been styled by her followers.

She said her purpose in coming here had been to assist three anarchists who were arrested here several days ago. She had intended to give herself up to the police, but delayed it for one reason and another until the police she had derided so much had taken the matter into their own hands.

She was held on a warrant sworn out by Capt. Collier, charging her with conspiracy to murder the president. As her co-conspirators, were named the anarchists already in jail here.

She will be taken before a magistrate Wednesday. It is expected that the city will ask for a continuance of the case, pending advice from Buffalo.

"I shall insist upon an immediate hearing," she said in speaking of the probability of a postponement being asked for by the city prosecutor. "They want me to go to New York without requisition papers, but I will not go; I know the legal ropes, and I'll make them fight every step. And I'm not afraid to go at that."

Chicago, Sept. 12.—Magistrate Prindiville Wednesday decided that Emma Goldman, the anarchist lecturer, under arrest here, should be held without bail pending the decision of similar cases in the upper court. The action of Justice Prindiville in holding her without bail extends only to Friday of this week. At that time the question will be reconsidered and the magistrate will decide whether she shall be held without bail or released under bonds until the preliminary hearing of the charges against her, which is set for September 19.

Miss Goldman appeared for a hearing before the magistrate during the afternoon. She had not secured counsel, but in a determined voice declared that she was ready to act as her own attorney. The assistant city prosecutor, however, obtained a continuance of the hearing till September 18, the date set for the hearing of other anarchists in custody here. Mr. Owens, the prosecutor, stated that the result of an investigation at Buffalo was being awaited.

Judge Advocate Lemly's Assistant. Washington, Sept. 11.—Mr. Edwin F. Hanna, solicitor of the navy department, has been detailed to assist Judge Advocate Lemly. Mr. Hanna combines the qualities of a good civil lawyer with a knowledge of maritime and naval law.

Gunboat Nashville at Sea. Suez, Sept. 11.—The United States gunboat Nashville arrived here Tuesday from Colombia and the Seychelle islands.

THE FREE SOCIETY. Superintendent Bull Has in His Possession the Code of Instructions to Assassinate Czolgosz.

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 12.—Superintendent Bull now has in his possession the code of instructions imparted to the selected assassin, Czolgosz. The platform of the Free Society was also added to the cumulative evidence of the anarchist conspiracy Wednesday. This document binds its members together to advocate and work for the destruction of the existing social order and continues:

"As in former times no privileged class ever relinquished its tyranny; no more can we take it for granted that the capitalists of the present day will forego their privileges and their authority without compulsion. It is therefore self-evident that the fight of the proletariat against the upper and the middle classes must be of a violent character and that mere wage conflicts can never lead to the goal."

"We show by numerous illustrations that all attempts which have been made in the past to do away with the existing monstrous social system through peaceful means—for example, the ballot box—have been useless and will be so in the future."

"We know therefore that the ruling class will not voluntarily relinquish its prerogatives and will make no concessions to us. Under all these circumstances there is only one remedy left—force."

"Our platform is simple and divided as follows: 1. Destruction of existing class domination through inexorable revolution in international activity. 2. The building of a Free Society on communistic organizations or productions. 3. Free exchange of equivalent products through the productive organization without jobbing and profitmaking. 4. Organization of the educational system upon non-religious and a scientific and an equal basis for both sexes. 5. Equal rights for all without distinction of sex or race. 6. The regulation of public affairs through agreement between the independent communes and confederations."

GOES TO OYSTER BAY. The Vice President Leaves Buffalo Confident That President McKinley Will Recover.

Milburn House, Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 11.—Vice President Roosevelt left the city Tuesday night at 9:50 for Oyster Bay perfectly confident that the president will recover. So confident was he, in fact, that when a question of doubt was put to him he answered it with a parry. He was asked: "Do you remember that President Garfield progressed for ten days, and that then just when he was ready to get out he collapsed and finally died?"

Quick as thought the vice president answered: "Ah, but you forget 20 years of modern surgery, of progress. From what I can learn also the Garfield wound was much more serious than the wound of President McKinley. I believe that the president will recover, and I believe it so thoroughly that I leave here to-night."

POLICE AFTER HIM. A Danbury Hatmaker Alleged to Have Said He Knew McKinley Would Be Assassinated.

Danbury, Ct., Sept. 12.—A warrant for breach of the peace was issued Wednesday for the arrest of Albert Weber, who, it is alleged, declared Tuesday at the factory of the O. Millard & Co., where he was employed as a hatmaker, that he knew before the shooting occurred that President McKinley was to be assassinated. When Weber reported for work, the other workmen in the department of the factory left the room, and told the superintendent that they would not work with the man. Weber denied that he was an anarchist.

CZOLGOSZ'S ACCOMPLICE. The Man Supposed to Have Accompanied Him to Buffalo Arrested On Suspicion.

Chicago, Sept. 12.—Edmond Wolczynski, formerly of Cleveland, was arrested here Wednesday afternoon on suspicion of being the man who was with Czolgosz at Buffalo shortly before the shooting of President McKinley. The prisoner denies that he knows anything about Czolgosz and the conspiracy to assassinate the president. He is being "sweated."

Expelled From the Post. Madison, Wis., Sept. 12.—Sam Kirby, of Stoughton, Wis., a veteran Grand Army man, was expelled from the post, having, it is alleged, remarked that "he would like to see the fellow who attempted to assassinate President McKinley and give him a quarter." The common council of Stoughton also revoked Kirby's contract for street sprinkling.

Soldiers' Home Inmate Degraded. Danville, Ill., Sept. 11.—John R. Leflier, an inmate of the National Soldiers' home, was degraded Tuesday by having the buttons cut off his coat. He was then drummed out of the grounds for having manifested elation at the attempt upon the president's life.

Dangerous Anarchist Coming. London, Sept. 12.—"Taffai, a dangerous anarchist and a friend of Bresci, has been expelled from Switzerland," says a dispatch from Geneva to the Daily Express. "He asserts that he intends to proceed to the United States."

Letting Him Down Easy. "That was a pretty harsh thing you said about me on the witness stand."

"What?" "Why, when they asked you about my reputation for truth and veracity, you said I hadn't any."

"Yes, that has troubled me a good deal since then, but, honestly, old man, I wanted to let you down easy, so I lied about it."

"I should think you did."

"But you ought not to complain. Suppose I told them what your reputation is that line actually is!"—Chicago Post.

Fashion's New Fad. "What is the nature of this new-fangled malady which they call the 'going spine'?"

"That," responded Cynicus, "is easy. 'Going spine' is what the old man used to have after a hard day's plowing, but he called it the backache."—N. Y. Times.

"The mother bird? dead, miss." "How do you know that?" "I see it in your hat!"—Punch.

NEGOTIATIONS OFF.

Last Efforts to Settle the Big Steel Strike Have Failed.

The Semi-Official Report Is That the Matter of Arranging For a Settlement Was Left With President Theo. J. Shaffer.

Pittsburg, Pa., Sept. 10.—The last efforts to settle the steel strike have failed. The general executive board of the Amalgamated association adjourned Monday evening without date and without either accepting any of the peace propositions which have come indirectly from the United States steel corporation or making any counter propositions, according to the official statement.

The semi-official report is that the proposition secured for the Amalgamated association through the intervention of the representatives of the National Civic Federation was unsatisfactory and that the entire matter of arranging for a settlement was left with President Theodore J. Shaffer. The board in its sessions of three days has been clamoring for a settlement, but satisfactory terms and means were not at hand and the sessions resolved themselves into an informal discussion of the situation.

At the close of the meeting of the national executive board Monday evening President Shaffer declared that he had no statement to make, but subsequently said: "The board has adjourned, and the out-of-town members will probably leave for their homes Monday night. No peace proposition has been received and none made."

Still later he added that he or no other member of the board would go to New York during the night to submit a peace proposition, saying that he would be at headquarters as usual Tuesday.

The meeting of the board did not adjourn in high good feeling, yet the members of the board were averse to making statements supplemental to that of President Shaffer.

It was stated by some of the members of the board that the adjournment had left matters practically as they were before the meeting had been called, and that the strike must go on as before, leaving arrangements for a possible settlement through a coveted direct conference between the representatives of the United States steel corporation and President Shaffer.

TABERNACLE DEDICATED.

Dowieites Invaded Evanston, Ill., and Met a Warm Reception By the Citizens.

Chicago, Sept. 11.—Four hundred Dowieites invaded Evanston Tuesday night and dedicated their tabernacle in that suburb. When their special train started back to Chicago they were given a parting volley of rocks, eggs and decayed fruit, which broke six car windows and injured two of the party. A number of the others were scattered with eggs.

It was only the fact that the Dowieites thought better of their determination to hold an outdoor meeting, and to the excellent protection they received from the police, that prevented them from being mobbed.

WAGON STRUCK BY A TRAIN.

Two Girls Who Were in the Vehicle Were Carried For a Block on the Pilot of the Engine.

Chicago, Sept. 10.—Seven persons in a wagon were struck at a crossing of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad at Sixty-third and Loomis streets Monday night.

Two girls who were in the wagon were carried for a block on the pilot of the engine and escaped unhurt, but terribly frightened. All the others were injured, and Mrs. N. Aardena and Catherine Houickerik may die.

Fear For the Czar.

Paris, Sept. 10.—Fear of the assassination of the czar of Russia during his visit to France has seized the officials of Europe since the attempt on the life of President McKinley. A widespread search for anarchists of whatever nationality is now in progress.

Made Uncomplimentary Remarks.

Topeka, Kan., Sept. 10.—Mayor Hughes Monday night discharged B. V. Beville, a member of the police force, who made uncomplimentary remarks about President McKinley. Beville is quoted as saying the president should die.

Postmaster Arrested.

Seattle, Wash., Sept. 11.—The postmaster at Nome, Joshua Wright, has been arrested and held for trial on the charge of embezzling $3,200 from the government of the United States. Postal Inspector Chinn is the principal witness against Postmaster Wright.

Died a Raving Maniac.

Peoria, Ill., Sept. 10.—William Nicman, an insane farmer, who had been under a delusion that the people were trying to lynch him for the murder of President McKinley, died, raving like a maniac, in the county jail, Monday.

McArthur's Reception Postponed.

Washington, Sept. 10.—The war department was notified Monday that the proposed reception at Milwaukee to Gen. MacArthur had been postponed on account of the shooting of the president.

COURT OF INQUIRY.

All Useless Ceremony Will Be Abandoned During the Sitzings of the Members.

Washington, Sept. 12.—Although no positive statement on that point is made, it is gathered from the attitude of the government officers that they have no present intention of calling Adm. Sampson.

While observing all the forms that are necessary to maintain the dignity of the court, there is no disposition on the part of its members to try to magnify its importance by useless ceremony. Therefore, there will be no waste of gunpowder in salutes, nor will the mariner be turned out in state at the navy yard as the three admirals make their way to and from the building where the court will meet. They go to the yard in plain clothing and thus relieve the commandant of the necessity of ordering an official salute. They wear the naval frock coat and gold epaulettes and the service sword. After the first day this uniform will give place to the easier though less impressive naval dress uniform, divested in large part of the heavy gold trimming of the dress suit, and even permitting the wearing of a comfortable blouse.

At 1 o'clock the members of the court were seated, Adm. Dewey at the center of the table, placed crosswise of the court room, with Rr. Adm. Howison on his right and Rr. Adm. Howison on his left.

The witnesses stand at the left end of the table; next the official stenographer and the judge advocate, Capt. Lemly, with Solicitor E. P. Hanna, his associate in the case, occupy the other end of the table.

The judge advocate first addressed the court and read the precept under which it is convened. The next step was the recognition of counsel by the court, and Capt. Lemly then introduced Mr. Hulse as the official stenographer. Next came the most interesting part of the day's proceedings, namely, the challenging by Adm. Schley's counsel of the competency of Rr. Adm. Howison as a member of the court. They reiterated the charge that Adm. Howison had expressed an opinion adverse to Adm. Schley, and it will be the object of counsel to support this charge by affidavits, and perhaps by oral testimony. It is for the court to say whether such testimony will be admitted. There will be no appeal from the decision of the court on this point. Even the secretary of the navy could not undo its work.

CZAR AND EMPEROR.

William Meets Nicholas on Board the Hohenzollern, at Hela, Prussia—They Embrace.

Hela, Prussia, Sept. 12.—The meeting between Emperor William and Emperor Nicholas was favored with perfect weather. The Hohenzollern, flying the German and Russian imperial standards at the mainmast, welcomed the Standart with an imperial salute, which the Standart returned, both crews dressing ship while the bands played the Russian and German national anthems.

Count Plateu, the kaiser's aide, went on board the Standart to escort the czar, who went on board the Hohenzollern. The kaiser received his imperial visitor at the gangway, where the two monarchs embraced each other. They then inspected the guard of honor together, after which they retired to the quarterdeck, where they remained in animated conversation until luncheon.

BOGUS CIGAR LABELS.

A Gigantic Swindle Said to Have Been Unearthed by Secret Service Men in Chicago.

The information leading to the investigation was given to the government officials by members of the International Cigar-makers' union. It is said that sufficient evidence has been secured to warrant the arrest of 11 persons and that they will be taken into custody Thursday or Friday.

G. A. R. ENCAMPMENT.

Thousands of Veterans Parade the Streets at Cleveland, O.

Eighty-Seventh Anniversary of Oliver H. Perry's Historic Triumph on Lake Erie Celebrated By a Grand Parade.

Cleveland, O., Sept. 11.—The naval veterans took first place in the festivities attendant upon the Grand Army of the Republic encampment Tuesday. The 87th anniversary of Oliver Hazard Perry's historic triumph on Lake Erie was fittingly celebrated in a grand parade of naval veterans and a naval display upon the lake.

Features of interest in the day's programme were as follows:

Reception by the Cleveland Yacht club, naval display on Lake Erie, the fleet being opened to inspection of the public; dog-watch of association of naval veterans at Gray's armory, campfire of Union ex-Prisoners of War at Central armory, reception for national officers of the Grand Army by women's relief corps at Chamber of Commerce hall, reception of ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic, west side campfire at Turner hall, and a lake-front naval display by the United States naval reserve boats, including illuminations and manoeuvres by the fleet.

At Central armory Tuesday night the Union ex-Prisoners of War held their 29th annual reunion. The armory auditorium was packed to the doors. Tom L. Johnson, mayor of Cleveland, presided. Gov. George K. Nash, of Ohio, and Gov. A. T. Bliss, of Michigan, addressed the assembly. Every speaker of the evening prefaced his remarks with a feeling tribute to the stricken chief executive of the nation, and John C. Black, of Illinois, voiced the sentiment of the assemblage when he said that "No assassin's bullet could ever endanger the life of the republic."

At a naval dog-watch in Gray's armory the principal speaker of the night was Capt. Richmond P. Hobson, of Merrimack fame. Capt. Hobson was enthusiastically received by the large audience.

President McKinley's old regiment, the 23d Ohio, in which he enlisted as a private in Company G, in 1861, and which had for its commander Col. Kutherford B. Hayes, another president, held its annual reunion Tuesday at the Chamber of Commerce auditorium. Over 300 men attended, which made the largest gathering of the regiment in ten years.

A resolution was unanimously adopted calling upon senators and representatives in congress to enact a law banishing all anarchists from the United States. Gen. Kennedy, of Columbus, then offered a resolution, which was adopted, stating that the 23d Ohio infantry, in mass convention assembled, extend its sympathies to its former comrade in arms, William McKinley, president of the United States, and Mrs. McKinley in the affliction brought upon them by a cowardly assassin.

Cleveland, O., Sept. 12.—The surviving veterans of the greatest war in all the annals of history, the Grand Army of the Republic, have again responded to the bugle call and Wednesday fell into line as they were wont to do in the dark days of the civil war.

In a seemingly interminable line of blue the various departments took up their march over the hard, granite pavements. Surging masses of people, numbering in the hundreds of thousands, lined the streets, and the house tops, and took advantage of every available point of view along the entire length of the line of parade. In the downtown districts the streets intersecting and adjacent to the line of march was one struggling mass of eager and expectant humanity.

It is estimated that nearly half a million people were spectators of the magnificent pageant. The column was over eight miles in length, and was splendidly handled, the column moving steadily and with scarcely a halt or break until the entire line had passed the reviewing stand.

The scene was most inspiring. Octogenarians of the tottering footsteps and others erect and sprightly as in youth, but all with limbs and hearts of steel, plodded patiently side by side, and among the thousands who made up that gallant host, there were scarcely a bare half-dozen whom the fatigues of the march caused to fall out before they passed through the living sea of faces in the court of honor and the reviewing stand.

Every department, as it passed the court of honor and neared the living flag of children formed upon the grand stand facing the long vista at the foot of Bond street, was greeted with a patriotic chorus from the throats of thousands of school children composing "The Flag." Mingled with the inspiring strains of martial music and patriotic choruses was the unstinted applause of the populace.

Want a Peace Conference.

Glasgow, Sept. 12.—The peace conference Wednesday passed a resolution urging the governments which are signatories of the Berlin treaty to convene a conference for the purpose of settling the Armenian question.

Tared and Feathered.

Casper, Wyo., Sept. 12.—Hans Wagner who is said to have expressed sympathy with (Zolgosz, was tarred and feathered and ridden out of town on a rail. He was warned that if he should return he would be lynched.

FRESH FASHION NOTES.

Some of the Small Adjuncts to Ladies' Costumes That Are Now in Vogue.

The latent tag ornaments are made of coins or jewels in pear or round shapes.

Genuine antique Persian brocade is used for the fashionable little wrist bags, with clasps of carved oxidized silver set with coral.

Velvet in floral patterns will be used as applique trimming in the autumn instead of the cretonne strips that have been so much in demand this summer, writes a fashion authority.

A touch of scarlet introduced in hat or gown trimming is a Parisian fancy for late summer and fall.

Buttons, stitching and strappings are noticeable adjuncts in the decoration of the new yachting costumes. Shaded materials are coming into vogue again.

Black and pale blue is a combination that this season has divided favor with the ever popular black and white.

Chiffon veils are much in evidence, but more as hat trimming than for face protection. They are generally dotted, and the favorite colors are white, blue, gray, black or brown.

The newest millinery ornaments are of gun metal, studded with cut steel or rhinestones. Cut jet combined with gold will also be used for hat decoration during the coming season.

For men travelers a "housewife" has been designed, which consists of a handy leather case, containing needles, thread, buttons and scissors. The case can be rolled into compact form and carried in the pocket.

The automobile cockade is the latest fad in hat trimming and is seen to special advantage on shirt waist models. The cockade consists of many loops of chenille or narrow width ribbon.

The Louis XIV. and long loose coats give opportunity for the use of large, fancy buttons and for the inside vest small, dainty ones may be utilized.

It is predicted that old-fashioned brocades will be introduced this season, at least brocade effects in silk. Taffeta chiffon, which combines the qualities of both these fabrics and lousine, are favored silks.

Apricot, a soft and generally becoming tint, is much worn in Paris and in combination with creamy lace and a touch of black velvet it is exceedingly effective.

Biscuit-colored point d'esprit gowns with large collars or fichus, trimmed with lace, are delightfully cool for these sultry August days. The essential note of black is introduced by means of black velvet or tulle choux on the bodice and a transparent yoke of fine black lace threaded with black bebe velvet ribbon. The belt is often of black taffeta, finished with three tiny steel buckles.

USES FOR OLD TABLECLOTHS.

There Are Many Ways in Which the Worn-Out Covers May Be Turned to Account.

When tablecloths are past service for their original purpose, they are invaluable till reduced to rags in a more humble capacity. Cut into convenient pieces about twice as long as they are wide and hem—you will find that by the addition of a row of machine stitching they rise greatly in the social scale, and are no longer to be treated as "old pieces of cloth," and will receive the respect and care given to other kitchen towels. Nothing else is so good to absorb moisture quickly and thoroughly. After washing lettuce, place the leaves in one of these linens doubled, take it by the four corners and shake, then fold in another dry one and lay in the ice box; this is far more expeditious than to dry one leaf at a time. They fill a "long-felt want" for absorbing the water from potato strips which have been soaking for some hours, in the process toward appearing as "French fried," and potatoes which are wiped before being put into the oven will bake in an appreciably shorter time, says Good Housekeeping.

Onto several thicknesses of linen which has been reposing in the warming closet, our asparagus goes straight from the kettle, as the easiest way to drain it before seasoning. I roll parboiled meats—roes or sweetbreads, and the like—in the fresh folds of one of these pieces and find it a great help to have them so far prepared for the broiling or frying which follows. Smaller pieces become a necessity to the cook after she has once used them to wipe meat or fish which is to be rolled in egg and crumbs, and finds that the crust will adhere to the food instead of remaining in the saute pan. Their softness makes them the handiest things imaginable to introduce into the irregular interior anatomy of game or poultry, a duty which should not be neglected before stuffing.

Corned Beef Hash, Spanish.

Have an equal quantity of corned beef and cold, boiled potatoes, chopped rather coarsely; melt in a frying pan two ounces of butter; in this fry a sliced onion, put in the hash, through which you have mixed a Spanish sweet pepper or pimento, very finely chopped; moisten the hash with a little good stock and melted butter.—People's Home Journal.

Irish Steep.

Take mutton chops, cover well with water, and let them come to a boil; pour this off and add more water; then a lump of butter the size of an egg, two tablespoonfuls of flour, one teaspoonful of milk, season, potatoes and two small onions. Boil until the potatoes are done.—Housekeeper.

BUSY WOMEN STUDENTS.

How Poor Undergraduates Manage to Make Both Ends Meet at American Colleges.

Miss Alice Fallows is the author of an article in the Century, which is entitled "Working One's Way Through Women's Colleges."

Just within the entrance of the gymnasium at Smith college is a small square room which looks like a booth at a church fair. The bulletin-boards on its walls are covered with blue prints, copies of Gibson pictures, painted frames, college flags, brightly-colored class banners, pincushions, pillow-covers and a score of other fancy articles which seem the pastime of an idle hour. In reality, each one represents the serious investment of a girl who is working her way. The Smith college calendar hanging in a corner took one girl half through the term. The picture-frame opposite paid the incidental expenses of another for a year, while the jolly pair of football players, constructed out of tissue-paper and pecans, sitting on the window-sill made the temporary fortune of their inventor. A day after she had slipped in and put them there they became the college fad, and for weeks she could not turn them out fast enough to fill her orders. Then suddenly their popularity waned; no one wanted them; and now, faded and covered with dust, the two favorites of a past hour sit neglected in their corner, a pathetic warning of the inconstancy of college demand.

Like Smith students, college girls everywhere try these picturesque methods of making money. The pretty trifles which they sell might seem to a poet the spontaneous expression of the feminine instinct for grace and beauty, but they illustrate rather a poverty of financial opportunities. A college man in his effort to support himself is limited only by his capacity. He can break stones in the road or publish a paper, as his talent provides. He is free to enter any trade or business in the town, or invent a new one if he pleases. He may wander where he will along economic highways and byways. No one thinks of putting an obstacle in his way.

But when a girl, out of the fullness of her desire, determines to work her way through college, she must first rid herself of the notion that she can copy her college brother. Otherwise she will meet with disappointment, for long ago Mrs. Grundy set a distinction between labor fitting for men and for women, and our colleges for girls still respect it. During undergraduate days, at least, they believe in an emphasis of the woman womanly. The self-supporting girl, therefore, finds before many an industry open to her college brother a sign on which custom or the college president has written the uncompromising words: "No Admittance." She can neither weed lawns nor dig gardens, clean furnaces nor shovel snow. The girl who should turn grocery clerk or who became a component part of a baker's or butcher's or hotel-keeper's staff in her college town would be a focus for the puzzled attention of the whole faculty, while a student dairymaid, fruiterer, or butter-merchant within the confines of the college would raise a storm of protest from Maine to California. Yet college men in similar positions meet only praise and commendation.

Doubtless some of the occupations in the diminished list for girls declared official by college censors will seem trivial enough to the masculine student-merchant who sells milk by the thousand quarts and butter by countless pounds. Nevertheless, the college girl invests as much energy and strength and originality in her tasks as the college man in his. If she earns as much money as he, her effort must be almost doubled. Few girls, under the circumstances, have the physical exuberance necessary to meet the strain of entire self-support. They must stop short at self-help. But the attitude of a woman's college is strongly paternal. Though restrictions are laid on the student who works her way, scholarships and loans, as far as they go, are the compensations, and when these are exhausted, a protective care and watchfulness which seldom fall to the lot of the college man.

Painted Pantry Shelves.

A couple of coats of white enamel paint on the shelves of the pantry does away with the necessity for shelf paper and the result is much more satisfactory.

THE WOMAN OF POISE.

Her Restfulness Is Not the Result of Accident But of Self-Education Along Right Lines.

The woman of poise is restful to those with whom she comes in contact. To the woman aspiring to this enviable state of mental equilibrium, of controlled power, I would say: First, remember to be saving of your nervous force. Do not dissipate your strength upon meaningless movements of hands, feet, eyes or head. Let each motion have a purpose, and expend no more strength upon it than it calls for. Learn to relax and keep the body in that state except so far as some member of it is called upon for action. Do not give a strong grasp where a light touch will do the work. Learn to be like an elastic band, which stretches no more than is required, and the strain removed returns at once to its normal condition. Second, it is trite to say: "Don't worry," so I shall modify the advice and make it possible to follow by saying: "Don't worry unnecessarily." With most women worry becomes a habit, and habits are hard to break, this one particularly. But it can be done. Sit down some day and think how few impending calamities ever get beyond the potential stage. Worry if you must, but do not begin before it is time. Life's tangles have a way of straightening out when we come close to them. Third, talk much or little, as is natural for you, but be sure that when you speak you say something. Endeavor to put individuality, which is a very different thing from eccentricity, into your remarks. Let your speech, even though it be about trifles, have pith and point. In conversation, as in most things, it is well to have a goal. The mention of a goal suggests a worth about what is perhaps, aside from nerves, the greatest enemy to poise. This is aimlessness. Too many women are aimless in their talk, aimless in their actions, aimless in their lives. Thus they fritter away the forces which, if concentrated, would result in that useful and harmoniously beautiful product of civilization, the highest type of woman—the woman of poise.—Ina Brevoort Roberts, in Woman's Home Companion.

LOVER'S CLEVER TRICK.

How He Changed the Color of a Rose and Surprised His Innocent Best Girl.

It was a lover who lately discovered this trick. When he was not with his ladylove he was studying chemistry and experimenting, and one day recently he found an easy method of changing the natural colors of flowers.

He was in the habit of presenting his sweetheart with bouquets of beautiful roses, which grew in his garden, and a few hours after he had made the discovery he took her half a dozen of the choicest white roses and told her that she could learn through them whether he was really in love with her or not.

"If you and I are destined for each other," he said, "these white roses will become crimson within five or six hours from now. Gradually but surely they will change color and you may regard the change not only as an indication that the flowers are delighted to be worn by you, but also as an infallible sign that happiness is assured to us in the future."

Sure enough, says the New York Herald, before the eyes of the wondering maiden the roses changed color and were crimson at sunset that evening. Marvelous indeed the change seemed to her, for how could she know that the roses were originally red and that her lover had simply bleached them white by holding them for some time over a pan filled with smoking sulphur before he handed them to her?

SYMPATHY SEEKERS.

They Are Uncomfortable People, a Burden to Themselves and Their Intimate Friends.

Sympathy is a soothing balm for hurts of soul or body, a precious cordial for human ills, but, like other cordials, one must be careful not to grow too dependent upon it, and become weakly, unable to bear any hurt without its aid. There are many sorrows that bring naturally and graciously their share of condolence and tender ministering, but there are other wounds, and heartaches which no hand but that of the Divine Healer should be allowed to touch, no eye but His to penetrate.

Yet there are persons so morbid in their craving for pity that every woe must be revealed. The want of harmony in the home, the defection of friends, the faults of husband, wife, brother or sister—nothing is too sacred or too private to be uncovered for sympathy. The habit grows with indulgence until every skeleton in the closet, every bickering at the dinner-table, every disappointment and unhappiness, is made the property of the neighborhood.—Wellspring.

SWIFT CHAMP, EDITOR AND OWNER.

ABOUT seventy-five men at work on the excavation of the old tunnel near Carlisle struck Monday. Commissary extortion and shanty rent raise are the grievances.

THE Democratic State Central Committee Tuesday decided that it is inexpedient to order a state primary for the purpose of nominating a candidate for United States Senator.

WHILE at work in his office Tuesday morning Howard Gratz, editor of the Kentucky Gazette, was stricken with paralysis. He is seventy-seven years old and has edited the paper for thirty-five years.

THE Atlanta Journal's leading editorial says Senator Wellington's unpatriotic and brutal remarks about the shooting of the President prove that he is unfit to be a member of the Senate, and that his expulsion from that body is demanded by a sense of public honor and decency.

THE out of town visitors arrested during the "four red liquor days" in Maysville were two prominent gentlemen from a prohibition county.—Maysville Ledger.

THIS is a cruel fling at Br'er Duley of the Flemingsburg Times-Democrat, who said the "four red letter" days of the Maysville fair should have been called the "four red liquor" days.

IT is rumored that Mr. Sherman Stivers, of this city, will in the near future start a Republican paper in Paris. This is simply following out a long established and hard to get rid of custom of starting a paper just prior to the regular election, and really has no other significance. It may serve as a medium for the two factions of the Republican party in this county to air their grievances.

The Who What When Minstrels

One of the largest and most fashionable audiences was out last evening to see the Who What When Minstrels in their new production. There were forty-eight people in the first part, and it was a first part seldom if ever seen before. The clever witticisms of Geo. Weaver, Nat Blossom, Hi Tom Ward and Gear Buckley, kept the house in one continuous round of laughter. The singing of Sherwood and Fox, the unique comedy four and Julian Walsh, was par excellence. In the olio was the French Gavotte by Frosto and Wardo, entitled "Aunt Matilda's Reception," telling a love story without words, at once the most gorgeously dressed act we have ever seen. The unique comedy four was the next number on the program, and they were fine, from the heavy opera to the most lively "coon ballad." Weaver and Donna did one of the most unique acts on the bill, taking three encores. The sensational Austins, on the triple bars, was a new European novelty, lately imported for this combination. Goldsmith and Hoppe made a great hit in their musical act. A better minstrel combination would be hard to find on this side of the water.—Wilkesbarre (Pa.) Times.

The "Haymakers" Are Coming.

A rather unique affair will take place in Paris about the first of October. The Improved Order of Red Men have a side degree devoted to fun and good fellowship, entitled "The Haymakers." Only members of the Red Men are entitled to admission. The principal business of the degree is to teach "tramps" how to make hay while the electric light shines. The Paris lodge is going to organize a "loft" and the conferring of the degree will be done by the lodge at Maysville. They are coming on a special train seventy-five strong, and will be accompanied by the celebrated "Haymakers' Band," the only one in the world. The Paris Indians will meet them at the train, in full uniform, and headed by the band a parade will be made through the principal streets. After the conferring of the degree a banquet will be given the visitors. It will be a gala night in Paris, and the freedom of the city will be extended to the visitors.

Fifty Dollars Without An Owner.

A dispatch from Cincinnati to the dailies says: Over $50 has been in the Sheriff's office for over twenty years, the share of Frank Groff in the partition of an estate. Frank Groff, of Paris, Ky., but who lived here previous to 1889, put in a claim for the money, but Tuesday Judge Ferris received a letter from him to the effect that he was satisfied that he was not the legal claimant, and didn't spell his name that way anyhow. Groff had a half-brother, W. C. Hebel, and two half-sisters, Caroline Hebel and Mrs. Emily Weber, all living in Chicago, and they may be able to establish some title to the money.

WANTED.—A good cook a housemaid. Splendid chance for the right parties. Apply at News office for name of party.

You Do, or You Don't Need Glasses

The eye being a rather delicate organ, great care should be exercised in the election of proper glasses. Many believe that glasses should be restored to only when the sight becomes so defective as not to be able to do without. This is a great mistake which must be combated. Whenever there is unmistakable evidence of the need of their aid, they should be used. A neglect of this rule sometimes produces mischief which results in serious trouble if the course be persisted in. Our Dr. C. H. BOWEN having just returned from taking a special course in Optics from one of the best specialists in New York, is prepared to do the best of work, having the latest improved methods of fitting. Reaction in the President's Condition.

At 9:30 last night the News received a bulletin which stated that the President's condition was not so good. His food has not agreed with him and has been stopped.

Reaction had at that hour not been established. The kidneys were acting well, but the pulse was not satisfactory, but had improved in the last two hours. The wound was reported as doing well.

At 10:30 he was resting quietly. Temperature, 100.2; pulse, 128.

The following is the latest news from the bedside of the President received last night. Unless unexpected complications arise only one bulletin a day will in the future be issued until the President is able to get up:

The surgeons all were in good humor at the conclusion of the morning consultation. They ran down the steps from the Milbourn home, laughing joyously. The condition of the President warranted such manifestation of pleasure they said.

The following bulletin was issued by the President's physicians at 9:30 a. m.:

"The President has spent a quiet and a restful night, and has taken much nourishment. He feels better this morning than at any time. He has taken a little solid food this morning and relished it. Pulse 120, temperature 100.2 degrees."

This means that everything is going just as it should. The progress of the case is plain to everyone who reads. These latest bulletins can call for no special comment.

At 3:35 p. m., when the afternoon consultation was over, the doctors announced that the condition of their patient continued favorable.

An Injustice to Our Merchants.

For several years past there have been a semi-annual visit to Paris of representatives of Cincinnati shoe houses who would rent the lobby of our hotels and display their wares, taking orders for the same. Their prices are no lower for the same class of goods than our home merchants offer, but nevertheless they seem to do a thriving business, as there are a great number of people in Paris, who seem to prefer patronizing foreign houses in preference to our home merchants. This naturally aroused the hostility of our local shoe merchants, and the News was requested to see what could be done to stop this injustice.

After a careful investigation we have come to the conclusion that there is no remedy under the existing laws. The Supreme Court has on several occasions decided that a resident of another State can sell his goods by sample, taking orders for future delivery, without paying any license whatever. And that is just how the matter stands now. Our city officials have time and again tried to make these sidewalk merchants pay a license, and each time have been confronted with the decisions of the Supreme Court.

There is only one remedy, and the News earnestly recommends it to the citizens of Paris and the county. Patronize your home merchants to the exclusion of all others. There is not a shoe offered by any of these itinerant merchants that cannot be duplicated, both in quality and price, by your home merchants. And then your home merchants are responsible. They are not here to-day and gone to-morrow. They are always here. If your purchase is not just as represented they will make it good.

The good citizen who has the interest of his town at heart will not buy from these peregrinating merchants, but will patronize the home merchant who pays his taxes and thereby assists in building up his town. The same rule will apply to all branches of trade; the shirt peddler as well as the shoe peddler. We earnestly hope our citizens will seriously think over this matter and come to the conclusion that it is to their interest to patronize their home merchants, especially when it does not cost any more and they will get better value for their money.

Distillery Property Sold.

The R. L. Crigler property, known as the Woodland distillery farm of 100 acres, near the city on the Harrodsburg pike, was sold at public auction Wednesday to Mrs. J. Will Sayre for $22,000. The Security Trust & Safety Vault Company represented the purchaser. The sale took place at 11 o'clock, Col. J. E. Delph acting as auctioneer.

Among the bidders were Col. John D. Creighton, of Omaha; Col. R. P. and James Stoll, Charles Berryman and others. The property was first offered in three tracts, and then as a whole it went to Mrs. Sayre for $22,000. While the property holds the distillery, it is said that the value was placed on the land. The price is considered extremely good. It is understood that Mrs. Sayre will dispose of the distillery building.—Lexington Democrat.

SUNDAY AFTERNOONS.

From the window of the chapel softly sounds an organ note. Through the peaceful Sabbath gloaming drifting shreds of music float. And the quiet and the freight and the sweetly solemn tunes. Bear me dreaming back to boyhood and its Sunday afternoons;

When we gathered in the parlor, in the parlor stiff and grand. Where the haircloth chairs and sofas stood arrayed, a gloomy band. Where each queer old portrait watched us with a countenance of wood. And the shells upon the whatnot in a dustless splendor stood.

Then the quaint old parlor organ, with the quaver in its tongue. Seemed to tremble in its fervor as the sacred songs were sung. As we sang the hymn, the hymn, the glad revival hymns. Of the glory of the story and the light no sparrow dims.

While the dusk grew even deeper and the evening settled down. And the lamplight windows twinkled in the drowsy little town. Old and young we sang the chorus and the echoes told it o'er. In the dear, familiar voices, hushed or scattered fervore.

From the windows of the chapel faint and low the music dies. And the picture in the firelight fades before my tear-dimmed eyes. But my wistful fancy, listening, hears the night wind hum the tunes. That we sang there in the parlor on those Sunday afternoons.

Mrs. Vane was at home and welcomed Barbara heartily.

"I'm all alone here, and you're just the person I want to see. Went to call on your mother yesterday. She is lonesome, and I've asked her to come and pay me a visit of a week or a month, just as she feels. I find that Thomas for some reason never heard of your father's death. Such things will happen even in a world of newspapers and telegraphs. I want you to tell me all about yourself and your plans. I don't believe you can do a thing, but I am ready to help you if you're the girl I think you are. The Vane families were proud and aristocratic people; but, if we have ever stood up for one thing more than another, it was for honest labor in the house or the field or the shop or anywhere. I hate the aristocracy of doing nothing. All my boys learned a trade, and all my girls can cook just as well as they can play the piano, and some of 'em better. I'd rather eat their pie than hear their piano. Sit right there, dear, and be comfortable."

Barbara had not been in the house half an hour before she was deeply in love with the lady of it. After an hour had passed she was astonished at Mrs. Vane's knowledge of human nature and her grasp of the subject of servants and housekeeping problems generally.

"People will tell you, my dear, that I am an eccentric old lady with a good many crank notions about servants. The fact is, I try to treat them just as Christ taught us to do. That's the reason folks call me queer. People that try to do the Christlike thing in all relations of life have always been called queer, and always will be."

When Barbara finally went away after refusing an urgent invitation to remain to tea, she had made an arrangement with Mrs. Vane to meet with her and Mrs. Ward and a friend of both, to talk over some practical plan for getting the servants and the housekeepers together for a mutual conference.

"If anything is done," Mrs. Vane insisted, "it must be done with both parties talking it over in a spirit of Christian love. It never can be solved in any other way."

The date fixed for the conference was two weeks from that afternoon, and Barbara went back to her work quite enthusiastic over the future and very much in love with the woman who was known to most of the members of Marble Square church as "that eccentric Mrs. Vane."

The two weeks had gone by quickly, and Thursday noon at dinner in the Ward house Barbara was surprised to find, when she came in to serve the first course, that Alfred Ward had unexpectedly arrived. He had spent two months of his summer vacation with college classmates on the lakes, and had returned sooner than his mother had expected, to stay until the term opened again.

"Arthur, this is Miss Clark, about whom I have written you," Mrs. Ward said, a little awkwardly. The young man looked at her with interest, and bowed politely. Barbara returned his bow simply, and did not speak. She felt a little annoyed as the meal proceeded and she was called in at different times. She thought the family was talking about her, and that the college student had been asking questions. Several times she was conscious that he was looking at her. It vexed her, although his look was always respectful.

The meal was almost over when Mrs. Ward suddenly asked his wife: "O, have you heard, Martha, that Dr. Law had a stroke yesterday? Very sudden. It will result in his leaving Marble Square pulpit."

"No! How sudden! What will the church do?"

Mr. Ward was silent a moment. Barbara was just going out. She slackened her step almost unconsciously.

"I have no question they will call Morton."

"Will he come?"

"I think he will."

"Good!" said Alfred.

"Yes, Morton will be a success in Marble Square pulpit," Mrs. Ward said, positively.

Barbara went out, shutting the kitchen door. She did not hear Mr. Ward say: "If Morton goes on as he has begun, he will become one of the greatest preachers this country ever saw."

CHAPTER IV.

TO BE OF USE IN THE WORLD.

When Barbara started that afternoon with Mrs. Ward for Mrs. Vane's to meet with her in conference, she had no plan of any kind worked out, even in the vaguest outline. She had told Mrs. Ward what Mrs. Vane had said before, and asked her whether she was willing to go with her. Mrs. Ward was very willing, and Barbara gave her credit for being as much interested as any woman might be expected to be in anything that was not even thought out far enough to be rightly called a "conference."

Mrs. Vane met them with her usual bright greeting, and again Barbara felt the sharpness of her look.

"I've asked Hilda to come in for a little while this afternoon. She doesn't want to stay very long, and I had rather hard work to persuade her to come at all. She's shy. Mrs. Ward, how's your headache? Or maybe this isn't your day for having one. I don't wonder your girls have trouble with you. You're so nervous with your headaches that I wouldn't venture to work for you short of ten dollars a week in advance. I wonder Miss Clark has stayed as long as she has."

All this the old lady said with astonishing rapidity and with a frankness that amazed Barbara and made Mrs. Ward laugh.

"Miss Clark is learning to put up with me, I think," Mrs. Ward said, with a kindly look at Barbara, who was pleased.

"O, I should think so," said Mrs. Vane, looking sharply from one to the other. "You don't either of you have many grievances, I imagine. Sit right there, Hilda!" she exclaimed as the girl Barbara had met on Sunday came into the room. "You remember Mrs. Ward and Miss Clark, Hilda? We met them last Sunday."

Hilda sat down awkwardly in the seat indicated by Mrs. Vane, and there was a moment of embarrassed silence. Hilda was dressed to go out, and Barbara could not help wondering how far the girl understood what the meeting was about. She began to feel a little angry at Mrs. Vane, without knowing just why, when that good woman very frankly cut across the lots of all preliminaries by saying: "Now, then, Hilda, you know well enough what I asked you to come in for. We want to make a beginning of some sort of helping the girls who are out at service realize what their work means, and what they are worth to a family, and all that."

Hilda looked embarrassed and said nothing. Barbara came to the rescue. "Don't you think the first thing we need to do is to settle on some really simple plan by which we can reach all the girls and let them know what we propose to do?"

"You never can do it," Mrs. Ward spoke with some emphasis. "It has been tried before by Mrs. Rice and one or two others. The fact is, the girls do not care to meet together for any such purpose."

"Mrs. Ward is right and wrong both," Mrs. Vane said. "I'm not going to discourage you, but you have set out on as hard a task as ever a lady undertook. The very people you want to help are the very ones who don't want you bothering around."

"Then perhaps we had better start with the housekeepers first," replied Barbara, feeling conscious of the big-ness and badness of the dragon as never before. "If you and Mrs. Ward and three or four more could—"

"But we have no plan," Mrs. Ward spoke up rather quickly. "You will simply find that the women of Crawford face the question without any ideas about it. We all agree that with rare exceptions the help we generally get is incompetent and unsatisfactory and not to be depended on for any length of time. And that's about all we're agreed upon."

Mrs. Vane looked sharply at Barbara and then at Hilda.

"Hilda," she said, sharply, but at the same time not unkindly, "tell us what you think. What's the matter with all you girls? What's the reason you aren't all full-grown angels like us housekeepers?"

Barbara could not help smiling, although she had been sitting so far with a growing feeling of discouragement. As for Hilda, she had evidently been long enough with Mrs. Vane to be used to her queer ways, and was not disturbed by her eccentricities. She shuffled her feet uneasily on the carpet, and dug the point of a very bright red parasol into a corner of a rug.

"I don't know, Mrs. Vane," she finally ly said, slowly. "I have no complaint to make."

"No, but I have. Now you know, Hilda, you didn't half do your work right this morning; and, if I hadn't come out into the kitchen, the pudding Mr. Vane likes would have been burned to a crisp. Wouldn't it?"

"Yes, ma'am," Hilda answered, her face rivaling in color her parasol.

"And yet you had the clock there before you as plain as day. What were you thinking of?"

"I can't always be thinking of a pudding!" Hilda replied, with more spirit than Barbara had yet seen in her.

"There, my child," Mrs. Vane said, gently, without a particle of impatience or ill nature, "I don't blame you much. I have let puddings burn, myself, when I was a bride beginning housekeeping for Mr. Vane. We must make allowances for human nature that can't always be thinking of puddings."

"At the same time," said Mrs. Ward, with a trace of impatience in her tone, "somebody must think of puddings while they are baking. We can't be excusing human nature all the time for carelessness and lack of attention to the details of service. I think one great cause of all the trouble we meet in the whole problem is the lack of responsibility our servants take upon themselves. Out of a dozen girls that have been in my house within the last three years, not more than two or three could be trusted to wash my dishes properly. What can a woman do when after repeated instructions and admonitions her girls persist in using dirty dishwater and putting things away on the shelves only half wiped? We can't always be excusing them on account of human nature. It may sound absurd, but I have gone to bed downright sick many a time because my girl would persist in putting dirty dishes back into the pantry." And poor Mrs. Ward heaved a sigh as she looked at Mrs. Vane, who sat erect and sharp-eyed before her.

"That's it!" she said, sharply. "Responsibility! That's the word. But how get responsibility into a class of people who have no common bond of sympathy or duty? No esprit de corps? The responsibility must grow out of a sense of dignity that belongs to the service. As long as the service is regarded by those who perform it as menial and degrading, the only thing we can expect is shiftlessness and all lack of responsibility."

"Responsibility generally goes with a sense of ownership," suggested Barbara. "But I don't see how anything like ownership can be grafted upon a servant girl's work. Now I wouldn't dare leave dishes dirty, because of my mother's training, no matter whose dishes they were. But I can easily see it is not very strange for a girl to slight any work in which she does not feel any ownership."

"There's another thing," Mrs. Vane said. "I've told Mrs. Ward so several times. She has always had a good deal of company and five in the family anyway a good deal of the time. She ought not to expect to get along with just one girl. At the close of a big supper it is almost half-past seven. The quickest girl can't wash up all the dishes properly in less than half an hour. If she wants to go out some natural than for her to do the work in a hurry? She has been at work all day since half-past six. She works longer hours and for less pay than young men in stores get for clerk service that is not so important by half as the housework for a family. Now I'll warrant that Mr. Ward pays some of his clerks down-town three times what he pays the girl at home for almost twice the hours of labor. Wouldn't it be better and cheaper in the long run, Mrs. Ward, to hire two persons to do your work, at least for a part of the time? I'm inclined to think a good many of us expect too much of one girl. And we ought to remember that for most of the time the work really is what must be called drudgery."

"One girl in the house almost kills me. Two would complete the business, I am sure," said Mrs. Ward, smiling at Barbara. "Some of what you say is very true. But I am sure Mr. Ward would never think of giving as much for the work in the home as he gives for clerk work in the store."

"And why not, if the service performed is as severe and, more than that, as important to your peace and comfort, and his own as good when he gets home? I know a good many farmers who think nothing of paying out several hundred dollars every year on improved machinery to lighten their own labor on the farm. But they think their wives are crazy if they ask for an improved washing machine that costs $25 or a few kitchen utensils of the latest style to save labor. That's one reason so many farmers' wives are crazy over in Crawford county asylum. Men expect to pay a good price for competent service in their business. Why should they expect to get competent servants in the house for the price generally offered?"

"I don't think it's the price that keeps competent girls away from housework," Mrs. Vane remarked. "I have figured it out that even on four dollars a week at Mrs. Ward's I can save more than I could possibly save if I worked for Bondman at five or even six, paying out of that for board, lodging and washing. If the price paid for competent servants was raised in Crawford to ten dollars a week, I doubt if the girls now in the stores and factories would leave their positions to enter house service."

"I believe they would, a good many of them, anyway," Mrs. Vane replied with vigor. "You can get almost anything if you pay for it." "But we must remember, Mrs. Vane, that the great majority of families in Crawford cannot afford to pay such prices for househelp. You have no idea how much trouble I am in for paying my girls four or five or a half a week. My neighbors who say they cannot afford that much tell me their girls become dissatisfied when they learn what we pay, and very often leave because I pay my girls more than other housekeepers."

"The whole question has as many sides to it as a ball!" ejaculated Mrs. Vane, rubbing her nose vigorously. "I think I shall finally go back to the old primitive way of doing my own work, living on two meals a day and washing the dishes once. You needn't stay any longer, Hilda, if you want to go."

[To Be Continued.]

TALE OF A MANILA BEAN.

A Traveling Agent Was Afraid to Trust a Professional Florist with It.

Quite an excitement has been created in Kensing by so small a matter as a bean, says the Philadelphia Record. The bean was brought from Manila two years ago by a traveling agent for a large manufactory, who had seen a tree covered with beautiful flowers and beans while traveling in Luzon, and had secured one of the pods. Fearing that if he confided it to a professional florist, he would lose the honor of introducing a new flower to Philadelphia, he turned over the bean to a Kensington woman, agreeing to pay one dollar a month for its care and culture until it produced flowers. The bean has been two years growing, but is not yet over two inches in height. Local botanists say it is not a bean, but a date seed, which has been planted in mistake. The owner, who paid $12 for one year's board for the bean, thinks the caretaker should now keep it for company, but she says she has had three door bells worn out by curious visitors. Recently the owner dug the plant up to see what the root looked like, and found that while there were only three inches of stem and leaves, a large 16-inch pot was filled with fibrous roots. He thought it would be a good plan to clip the roots, since which time the Manila bean has been but a little faded flower. The caretaker asserts that in two years she has served the bean with 1,400 gallons of water and taken 20,000 steps in carrying it around the house, to give it the full benefit of sunshine. It was as much trouble and care as a baby, only it did not cry at night.

On Second Thought.

"I will," she exclaimed; "I will not live with you another day!"

"You'll leave me, will you?" he calmly asked.

"Yes, I will."

"When?"

"Now—right off—this minute."

"You'll go away?"

"Yes, sir."

"I wouldn't if I were you."

"But I will. I defy you to prevent me. I have suffered at your hands as long as I can put up with you."

"Oh, I shouldn't try to stop you," he quietly replied. "I'll simply report to the police that my wife has mysteriously disappeared. They'll want your description and I will give it. You wear No. 5 shoes, you have an extra large mouth, you walk stiff in your knees, your nose turns up at the end, eyes rather on the squint, voice like a—"

"Wretch! You wouldn't dare do that!" she screamed.

"I certainly will, and the description will go in all the newspapers."

They glared at each other a moment in silence. Then it was plain to be seen that she had changed her mind.—Washington Star.

The Phantom Ship.

While the captain of an English steamer was standing on the bridge of his vessel as it passed down the English channel, a thick fog came on and he began to sound the fog-horn. To his dismay, after he had sounded the signal, he heard the "Boo-o-o" of the horn repeated directly ahead of him.

He turned his ship's head sharply to the right to avoid a collision and sounded another warning. Again the "Boo-o-o" was returned. The vessel was put back on its former track and the fog-horn sounded, with the same result.

"I could not make it out," said the captain, in narrating the story, "and a strange feeling of superstition came over me. Just as I was giving myself one last pull together the lookout man called: 'It's the old coo, sir!'"

"And so it was—the cow kept in the forecastle for the use of the ship. Undoubtedly she took the sound of the fog-horn for the cry of a companion in distress, and gave a sympathetic response." —Youth's Companion.

Disciplined His Mule.

A mule in a pack train which was usually loaded with salt discovered that by lying down and allowing the salt to dissolve he could lighten his burden. The muleteer once loaded him with sponge instead, which absorbed water when he lay down in the stream and made his burden fourfold heavier. The mule was cured of his smartness.—Chicago Journal.

A SCHOOL DAY.

Polly's gone to school to-day.
That is why the house is still—
Carried smiles and chatter gay
To the schoolhouse on the hill.
Everything is prim and neat;
No need now to scold or frown;
Yet I long for little hands
Scattering playthings up and down.

Noah's ark is stranded safe
High upon a sand hill's crest,
And the animals are all
Taking a much-needed rest;
In their places sit the dolls,
On each face a painted smile
As they wonder why "Mamma"
Leaves them such a long, long while.

Mother Goose is on the shelf,
Johnny Warner and Bopeep;
The china dog upon the rug
Has long since fallen fast asleep.
Slow the sun creeps down the west;
Slow the coming of the night;
What a pity baby girls
Need must learn to read and write!

When my darling comes from school
With her little stock of lore
Shall I chide her childish ways
As I've often done before?
In the stillness I have conned
O'er and o'er love's golden rule;
Dreamed of life in love's eclipse;
Thus I, too, have been to school.

CHAPTER I.

"IT'S the last throw, Jean; why have a paltry 20 from the wreck?"
"Better pocket it, Paul, old man; may want an absinthe before morning."

"Aut absinthe, aut nihil," was the sinister retort. "I'll take the chance." He touched the note to his lips in token of farewell, and placed it on the red. The red lost.

The flashing lamp of the Deschanel club has been a fatal lode-star to many a youth whom the common gambling den could not sear. To scores of the young aristocracy of New Orleans it has been the starting point to a certain goal.

Sunlight, through the glass of a richly studded rotunda, traces delicate patterns upon deep-piled rugs. Tapestries and hangings, the envy of eastern princes, deaden all sounds. Carefully shaded lamps soften outlines and remove the traces which one man hates to see in the face of another.

From the walls gems of recent salons tempt the gambler an instant from his play. The exquisite in art is a brief sedative to ragged nerves. Music from a hidden orchestra lessens the tension, unseen, always felt, wherever there is play.

Attendants, silent, impassive, alert, glide from room to room, where nothing risks, much less, disgraceful, ever happens. From dome to carpet nothing offends the sense of the most acute of the Latin-Gallic race. And yet, by reason of its name, the discretion of its habitués and the cleverness of its management, this fool's paradise, known to every police precinct of New Orleans, has thus far eluded the vigilance of the law.

The plan of the place sprang full-grown from a woman's brain. By no means its least attraction lies in the constant presence of this woman with an imperturbable past. When the club opened a rumor winged abroad that Mme. Deschanel was the widow of Gen. Felix Deschanel, who fell in the campaign of Maximilian in Mexico. Of bounties and plunder, it was whispered that this brilliant general had reaped a golden harvest, with which his widow had founded the Deschanel club. What men knew was that Mme. Deschanel, president, secretary and hostess, ruled her small domain with perfect justice and exquisite tact. More would have been unnecessary, if not superfluous.

Paul de Lignac and Jean Baronne turned from the roulette table, where de Lignac had courted disaster by forcing his luck to the limit.

"Where now, Jean?"
Baronne sent a side glance to his friend, whom his mind flashed a decision not to leave before the morning.

"Where?" he repeated, glancing carelessly at the clock.

"There's a well-browned capon awaiting your verdict at my quarters and a glass of red Burgundy is the best lens I know for studying a situation."

"A thousand thanks, Jean—but—hang it all, I don't want to see anybody!"

"See anybody!" exclaimed Baronne. "Have you forsaken your final senses? Do you think a bachelor keeps a body of female relatives stowed away in his apartments? My valet is there, but the stream of our combined woes at the flood would not weaken the barrier of his reserve."

"The Levee is more to my mood,"
"Too crowded for a patrician."
"Or a few drops of prussic in a cordial."

"Something quite original in melodrama. Ha! ha!" Baronne forced a laugh which did him credit.

"You've turned egotist, my dear fellow. Do you fancy that you are the first man in this little Paris to lose a year's income between lunch and dinner? Besides, is the fire more tempting than the frying-pan?"

To De Lignac's inquiring look, he added: "This may be the Inferno, my friend. I presume upon poetic license to suggest that you might find an even worse place."

"The weariest and most loathed worldly life * * * is a paradise to what we fear of death!" Shakespeare's coat was buttoned when he said that.

"Your levity grates you, Jean. It is this enigma to let your good heart shine through. But have a look at figures—no 'poetic license' about them. Not a cent in my pockets. The indulgence of family and generosity of friends alike, strained to the snapping point. Eight months to the next allowance."

His metallic voice bit off the sentences.

"May I point a problem to tax ever your clever brain?"

"A plague on problems! I have solved worse. But, for the moment, why look beyond a good dinner? No problem there, surely. Come."

After a moment's resistance to the hand upon his shoulder, the two men left the club and crossed Lafayette square.

CHAPTER II.

At half after seven, the bell on the secretary's desk at the club jingled. Mme. Deschanel raised the telephone receiver.

A voice said: "De L. came home with me to-night, after losing everything this afternoon. His mood was so black that I dared not leave him. I urged him to rest before dinner. When he seemed to be asleep, I left the room for a moment. He has shot himself. What is to be done?"

"Good heavens!" exclaimed Mme. Deschanel, is that you, Baronne?"

"Yes."
"I'll be there in ten minutes."

Scandal, exposure, ruin chased through her brain as Mme. Deschanel threw herself into the first of the long line of hansoms stretching away from the door. She gasped an address, promising triple fare for haste.

Ten minutes later Baronne, in person, admitted her to his apartments. Without a word they entered a bedroom. The large room was dimly lighted. A single candle burned on the mantel. The furtive glance of the excited woman, as by instinct, sought the canopied bed on the opposite side of the room.

There lay De Lignac, deadly white. He was still fully dressed. An outstretched arm hung over the side of the bed. Beneath it, on the floor, lay the revolver, just as it had fallen from his hand. The single glance read the situation.

"Horrible!" "Horrible!" muttered Mme. Deschanel. The pent panic sought outlet. "A white-livered fool like him should stay at home with his mother! Coward! Execrable—why—if one word of this escapes, my place is ruined. The pleasure of hundreds sacrificed to a child!"

She turned fiercely upon Baronne. "How much did he lose?"

"His annual allowance," answered Baronne. A slight tremor touched his voice. "And some hundreds, borrowed from friends who chanced to be at the club this afternoon."

"H'm! as bad as that?" said Mme. Deschanel in a quieter tone.

"It's a nasty mess at best." A sudden idea reached her.

"Does anyone else know of this?"

"No; my valet, the only person in the place, happened to be in the wine cellar at the moment."

"Good! Very good!" The furrows in the woman's brow smoothed perceptibly. The cool, keen gambler succeeded to the hysterical bundle of emotions.

"Now, then," she said, curtly. "I rely upon you, Baronne, as a man of honor and a gentleman, not to betray the secret. Shortly after I leave, you will follow and not return until to-morrow, when you will discover him."

A cloud shadowed her brow as she detected a possible flaw in her plan.

"Your valet—does he enter this room?"

"Never, without summons," came the laconic reply.

"To-morrow, you will discover the sad affair. You understand?"

"Yes, but—"
"I'll put these notes in his pocket." Mme. Deschanel shivered slightly as she tucked a roll of bank notes into the waistcoat pocket of the dead man. The devil even dares not cross the chalk line drawn by Death. Then she hurried from the room.

"There," she added, at the door. "Want of money could not possibly have been the motive of the suicide."

A quiet, self-complacent smile relieved the haggard look of her face. The thought that she had saved the house of Deschanel cheered her more leisurely drive back to the club.

CHAPTER III.

At midnight the life of the Deschanel club is at its height. Men, flushed with champagne, lounge indifferently upon divans, sit doggedly at one table or stride feverishly from room to room, trying a hand at baccarat, roulette or other games.

The pale drink makes many kinds of men. But one thought rules them. Whether by indifference, persistence or vacillation, the genius of the hour and place must be served.

Wheeled, if possible, bullied, if necessary, now the one, again the other tactic wins from Fortune, fleeting favor for her devotees.

Shortly after midnight the outer door opened and swung to. A young man, carefully dressed and with the appearance of having dined leisurely and well, entered. He approached the roulette table and carelessly tossed a hundred dollar bill on the red. The red won.

Mme. Deschanel, standing near, chatting with a group of animated men, lifted her eyes to the victorious player. In her most courteous and imperious manner she said:

"Ah! my compliments to Mr. de Lignac; twice a winner."

English Railway Map.

A remarkable contrast to the map of precious stones which lately astonished Paris is the railway map on tiles put at York station by an English company. It is made of white tiles, the lines being marked in black and burnt sienna. It is about six feet square, and each tile is eight inches square. The company intends to have similar maps at all important stations on its system.

A GLOWING REPORT.

An Indiana Man Compares Western Canada with the United States—What Mr. Frank Fisher, a Prominent Dunkard, Has to Say After a Trip Through Canada.

The Department of the Interior at Ottawa has just received from Mr. E. T. Holmes, the Agent of the Government stationed at Indianapolis, Indiana, the following letter, which requires no comment. It is only necessary to state that Mr. F. Fisher, the writer of the letter, is one of the most prominent of the Dunkards and a man upon whose word the utmost reliance can be placed. His home is at Mexico, Indiana, and he will be pleased to substantiate verbally or in any other way all that he says in his letter.

To my many friends:
I am pleased to make a report to you of the pleasant visit my wife and I had in Western Canada.

We visited the territories of Alberta, Assiniboia, and Saskatchewan, and found them far surpassing our imagination, but little did I expect to find such rich, loamy soil, so much of it, and so uniform in its level prairie lay. I do think the soil of Canada as a rule equals if not exceeds the finest prairie farm lands of Indiana. These lands are immense in their richness, and when once the soil is rotted and pulverized, it is as pliable and as easily cultivated as Indiana sandy soil.

Western Canada, from my point of view, offers as fine opportunities for mixed farming as any place in my knowledge. The long, sunny days, together with the rich soil, produce very fine wheat, oats, barley, flax and other cereal products. There is scarcely any attempt to raise corn, except early varieties for table use. The season is too short to depend upon maturing field corn. From the standpoint of getting this land ready for the plow, I must say that I never saw such a vast extent, practically all ready, so all that one has to do is to hitch up the plow and go to work. This is not the case with all the Canadian land, however; some of it has quite a bit of timber, much of it may be called brush land, and some of it has lovely forest groves, dotted here and there, thereby covering a hundred and sixty acres.

I have no doubt but that this country excels as a grazing or ranching country, because they have such rich grass, having an abundance of rain to keep it fresh. They also have plenty of water streams, and as a rule water may be reached at a depth of from 20 to 40 feet. From this you see there can be plenty of hay mown for winter feeding, and I have had reliable farmers to tell me that their stock will feed on hay alone, and be ready for market in the spring. Upon inquiring about the expense of raising a steer, a farmer replied that he did not consider it would cost any more than $4.00 or $6.00 to develop a three-year-old steer.

I truly think Canada offers a fine opening for a young man or a man who is renting land in Indiana. One hundred and sixty acres of good black land will cost you only $10.00 at the time you enter it, and by plowing and cultivating five acres each year for three years, gives you one hundred and sixty acres of good land for $10.00. This land can be bought from the Railroad Companies, private corporations or the Government for $3.00 to $4.00 per acre.

From a financial standpoint, I believe that for a series of years (five), a young man can make $10.00 in Canada, whereas he would only make $1.00 here, and I feel sure that I spent more money to get my eighty acre farm in White County, Indiana, cultivated, than it would cost me to cultivate eight hundred acres in Canada. This may seem a strong view to take of the matter, but when you take into consideration the clearing, ditching, fencing and the expensive breaking in of the stumps, and then compare the expense to that of land needing only the breaking, you will conclude that it is not such a wild or exaggerated statement as you might at first think.

I enjoyed the balmy, breezy atmosphere, which was bracing and refreshing, and the cool nights which made it so pleasant for sleep.

On making inquiries regarding the winters in this country I learned that the people never suffer from the cold, as the weather is dry and invigorating, and in a great many places, farmers and herders allow their stock to run outside the year round.

One great advantage to the settlers in Western Canada is the free creameries established by the Government, and run exclusively in the interest of the farmer.

I visited Thomas Daley, a farmer near Edmonton, Alberta, who showed me oats he had raised, some of which took the first prize at the Paris Exposition last year. The same yield of 110 bushels to the acre in 1899.

Yours truly,
FRANK FISHER.

A METHODIST BISHOP GIVES PE-RU-NA GREAT CREDIT.

BISHOP GRANT, OF INDIANAPOLIS.

Bishop A. Grant, of Indianapolis, Ind., writes the following letter:

Indianapolis, Indiana,
3349 N. Pennsylvania Street.

Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O.

Gentlemen—

"I have been using Peruna for catarrh and can cheerfully recommend your remedy to anyone who wants a good medicine."

—A. Grant.

Prominent members of the clergy are giving Peruna their unqualified endorsement. These men find Peruna especially adapted to preserve them from catarrh of the vocal organs which has always been the bane of public speakers, and general catarrhal debility incident to the sedentary life of the clergyman. Among the recent utterances of noted clergymen on the curative virtues of Peruna is the above one from Bishop Grant.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

Rev. E. G. Smith, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, of Greensboro, Ga., writes:

"My little boy had been suffering for some time with catarrh of the lower bowels. Other remedies had failed, but after taking two bottles of Peruna the trouble almost entirely disappeared. For this special malady I consider it well nigh a specific."—Rev. E. G. Smith.

Rev. A. S. Vaughn, Eureka Springs, Ark., says: "I had been prostrated by congestive chills and was almost dead; as soon as able to be about, I commenced the use of Peruna. I took five bottles; my strength returned rapidly and I am now enjoying my usual health."—Rev. A. S. Vaughn.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

The trial of Jim Howard, charged with the murder of Gov. Goebel, was continued until the January term of the Franklin Circuit Court Wednesday. The continuance was granted by Judge Cantrell on the ground that the Commonwealth's Attorney had failed to notify the defendant ten days before the opening of the present term of court.

The conspiracy cases of the Commonwealth against W. S. Taylor, Charles Finley, Berry Howard, fugitive from justice, and against Green and Wharton Golden and William Culton were called and were continued until the January term.

Question Answered.

Yes, August Flower still has the largest sale of any medicine in the civilized world. Your mothers and grandmothers never thought of using anything else for Indigestion or Biliousness. Doctors were scarce, and they seldom heard of Appendicitis, Nervous Prostration or Heart failure, etc. They used August Flower to clean out the system and stop fermentation of undigested food, regulate the action of the liver, stimulate the nervous and organic action of the system, and that is all they took when feeling dull with headaches and other aches. You only need a few doses of Green's August Flower, in liquid form, to make you satisfied that there is nothing serious the matter with you. Get Green's Prize Almanac.—W. T. Brooks

HIS SIXTH AERIAL SHIP.

What Santos-Dumont Says of His New Machine.

FUTURE OF STEERABLE BALLOONS

Daring Brazilian Believes They Will Take the Place of Trains—Says His New Propeller Will Make About One Hundred and Sixty Revolutions a Minute.

M. Santos-Dumont, the daring balloonist, has been working day and night to complete his new flying machine, his sixth, in which he hopes to circle the Eiffel tower. Like Lipton, the question of expense never bothers him. He seeks the prize, no matter what it may cost.

"Everything is now ready for my next ascent," said M. Santos-Dumont to the Chicago American's Paris correspondent. "After weeks of prodigious labor since the wreck of my last balloon I have created another, and today (Aug. 31) for the first time I have taken things a bit leisurely. This balloon, which I call Santos-Dumont VI., seems to be satisfactory.

"It is only by experiment that we have been able to advance gradually until the conquest of the air is within our grasp. When the Santos-Dumont I. was built, we were groping. The Santos-Dumont VI. sees us within sight of the promised land. One becomes an aeronaut just as a man becomes a sailor, except that the former calling is much more exciting, and an aeronaut is never weighed down by a spirit of melancholy such as often marks the seaman.

"There are many fine points to be considered in making a balloon. Everything should be tight and well made. The motor should be strong. The rudder of a good balloon must be exactly poised. The question of hydrogen is of prime importance. We manufacture it in our laboratory by pouring water and sulphuric acid over steel filings. It is then dried by passing through chloride of calcium, sawdust and lime. We remove the heavy, dangerous carbonic acid by a device containing caustic soda. This leaves the hydrogen very light, with a lifting power of more than 1,000 grams per cubic meter. Then there are automatic valves which on the one hand must not be too sensitive, yet must be sufficiently so. If not sensitive enough, the pressure upon the balloon becomes dangerous.

"The propeller of the new airship makes about 160 revolutions a minute. This enables me to make headway against the wind, although I will select the best weather conditions possible for my next trial. I expect little difficulty so far as ascensional capacity is concerned. The steering is a great question. I hope to make the trip from St. Cloud around the Eiffel tower in twenty minutes."

It is no more a new sensation for satiated appetite that this young South American millionaire is seeking. His daring flights are not for the purpose of creating temporary fame on the boulevard. He is studying this working seriously to solve the great problem of aerial navigation and has startling views of the future revolutions which may result from the present experiments.

"I look upon the Santos-Dumont VI. as the nucleus of a navy of airships," he said. "Within a few years the steerable balloons will take the place of trains. We shall sail over the Alps instead of tunneling through them. We shall cross the Atlantic without wetting our ship. We shall make a tour of the world in a time short enough to frighten even Fitzmorris, the Chicago boy who went around the world in sixty days. The steerable balloon will be a frightful instrument of war. Its hovering presence would demoralize an army. The soldiers go to war, the king stays at home, but a balloon might be sent to dismantle his castle.

"A steerable balloon would have brought the empress of China promptly to her senses. It can be used for carrying all sorts of messages and can throw bombs from midair into ships and forts. With wireless telegraphy we can send messages back and forth to earth. Its possibilities are illimitable."

King Alfred's Camp.
The approaching millenary of Alfred the Great lends special interest to the estate of Winklesbury, in Hampshire, now in the market, says the London Chronicle. It contains the well known circular camp of that name, said to have formed a stronghold of Alfred. Excavations just made by Reginald Smith of the British museum have brought to light fragments of ancient British pottery. An examination was also made in the autumn of last year, and on both occasions bones of extinct animals have been discovered showing traces of fire, probably sacrificial. The camp is believed to have existed before the Roman invasion. It was occupied as late as the seventeenth century by the parliamentary forces when besieging Basing House.

London Wants a Sanitary College.
A movement is on foot for the establishment of a sanitary college, the idea being the erection of a large building in which to carry on the work of education in sanitary science now being conducted at the Parkes museum, says a London correspondent. This last named institution was founded in 1876 in memory of the late Edmund Alexander Parkes, the first professor of hygiene in England. It is really a public demonstration school and has been the means of preparing a large number of men for useful public health work.
